Defining Terms

New literacies – skills needed to communicate effectively and gain meaning from and with today's technology

Information Communication Technologies (ICTs) are the tools students use to create multimodal literacies

Multimodal literacies – reading and creating text with print, images, videos, charts, interactive links, etc.

Something for even the self-proclaimed “un-techy” teachers

Google in the Classroom

Pros: Free, ease of collaboration and feedback, automatic saving online, user-friendly word processing and presentation software

Cons: Must have email account for each student or if you share classroom account every student has access to everything on the drive
